

was made at 4 o'clock and a reception aboard the Geler was held in the evening.

The luau given last Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Wilder of Judd street, in honor of the returned collegians from Harvard, was noticeable for its informality and old-time hospitality. The young men were greeted by their old friends and former playmates with a gusto which makes a young man glad to stay away from home a year and then return home just to receive such a welcome. Fashion's whims were set aside when the weather became too warm to make coats comfortable, and at the luau negligee was observed by the young men. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Walker, Mrs. F. K. C. Gibbons, Miss Atkinson, Miss Kathryn Widdfield, Miss Cronwall, Miss Gertrude Scott, Mr. Walter Dillingham, Mr. Isaac Dillingham, Mr. C. N. Prouty, Mr. A. L. C. Atkinson and Mr. Robert Atkinson.

A do Souza Canavaro, the Portuguese Consul, was the recipient on Thursday evening, at his residence, of a beautiful silver toilet set engraved with his monogram, with the date, "May 4, 1900," thereon. An address of presentation was made by Major Camara, stating the gift was a mark of esteem in which the Consul was held by the people under his charge and for his services during the many years he has acted for the mother country. The Consul fittingly responded to the presentation and thanked the donors. Music was furnished during the evening.

One of the attractions at the Hotel Annex beach on Sunday was a canoeing party composed of Walter and Harold Dillingham, C. N. Prouty, Robert Atkinson and Isaac Dillingham. They paddled far out into the surf and then dropped over the side of the canoe, showing only their heads, and sang many of their college songs. The bathers and spectators on the beach applauded the glee club and compelled them to respond to encores. It is one of the most harmonious quintettes that has been heard in the Islands.

The reception and dance to be given Wednesday at Moanalua by Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Damon in honor of Miss Alice Wall and Mr. Frederic C. Smith promises to be one of the most brilliant social events of the season. Society will be there in force and the function will vie with the many that have made Moanalua famous in the past. Special trains have been arranged for, to leave the city at 8 and 8:30 p. m., returning at midnight and 1 a. m.

Mr. Edward Sahr entertained on Saturday evening last the officers of the German war vessel Geler. A large number of guests were present to greet the naval men and to wish them Godspeed and success in their new field of action. These present were mostly Germans. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hoffmann, Mr. Paul Isenberg, Mr. C. Bohe, Mr. Hackfeld.

Dr. and Mrs. William C. Stubbs of New Orleans were entertained on Thursday evening at dinner by Prof. and Mrs. Walter Maxwell. The dinner party was small, but given with the well-known hospitality of the host and hostess. Prof. Maxwell is a former pupil of Dr. Stubbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Burr of New York City have sent cards to Honolulu announcing the marriage of their daughter.

THREE HOODOO SHIPS WHICH ROCK AT REST UPON THE HARBOR'S BOSOM AND WEAR THE GARB OF MYSTERY

away in a corner of the harbor, as if to make the most of each other's company, and as far as possible from the bustle of modern vessels of commerce, to visit these waters, a trio of hoo-doo ships is to be found. They are at the Ewa end of Naval harbor, the ancient bark Sebastian Bach, the Hawaiian man of war, Kaimiloa, and the little old steamer Kaena. Nobody knows them. They have been here peculiarly to Honolulu harbor without them. The people here hire boats for the purpose of rowing out to view these hoo-doo ships as they lie at anchor together near to the spot where the ribs of other and older vessels are to be found. They point to the mysterious hoo-doo ships as they lie at anchor together near to the spot where the ribs of other and older vessels are to be found. They point to the mysterious hoo-doo ships as they lie at anchor together near to the spot where the ribs of other and older vessels are to be found.

her tolls beneath the surface of the great ocean, not far from the Garden Isle, Kaimiloa. The City of Columbia was the queen of hoo-doo ships; should the Sebastian Bach attempt another voyage in the direction of the Orient she would probably seek a grave similar to that now occupied by the City of Columbia. She is far too valuable as a storehouse ever to be risked again at sea. A couple of old, retired sailors live aboard the Sebastian Bach and take care of her. They are proud of the old hulk, and are to her as a captain and his first officer might be. Safe at anchor in their secluded corner of the harbor these old salts go through all their sea experiences over and over again in their uninterrupted yarns to the accompaniment of plenty of tobacco and well seasoned pipes and the feeble splashing of the lazy tide on the sides of the dilapidated bark. The Sebastian Bach is in good company. Right next to her, on the Waikiki side, lies the Kaimiloa, the famous Hawaiian man of war which carried Minister Plenipotentiary Bush to the Samoan Islands for the purpose of adding those desirable isles to the great little kingdom of the Pacific, Hawaii. The glory of the schooner warship is departed now, though an atmosphere of greatness and importance still surrounds her. She hasn't the first appearance of being a fighting ship, though at one time she was the pride and hope of the Hawaiian navy. Her smart, venturesome, energetic appearance is gone, now she is nothing more or less than a scow, even the souvenirs of the sea, allowed to collect and multiply on her bottom for years in this harbor, were ruthlessly scraped off during the plague epidemic and seized upon by enthusiastic collectors of things curious. The Kaimiloa was wanted during the days of quarantine as a scow for the reception of merchandise from vessels not permitted to unload at the wharves. It was a great come-down for the gallant ship of battle to be made a common carrier with the small limits of a little harbor. Nor did she have much of this work to do. She was soon stowed away near the reef at the end of Naval Row, and there allowed to remain, stripped of all that gave her any claims to being a fighter, and burdened with the gear of a little freight receiver, including a big, unwieldy and inartistic, rusty donkey engine. Close alongside the Kaimiloa lies the steamer Kaena. Although she perhaps can lay the greatest claims to usefulness, she is nevertheless considerable of a hoo-doo, and has her story of peculiar experiences, all her own. It would take a book to contain the startling and interesting incidents connected with this trio of hoo-doo ships: the Kaena, Kaimiloa and Sebastian Bach. The Kaena also figured conspicuously in the work of downing the bubonic plague. This steamer was engaged to tow the remains of Chinatown out to sea, and was kept pretty busy taking out scows loaded with rubbish and scraps and heterogeneous stuff for a long time. She has often towed the city's refuse to a good distance outside the harbor and given it over to the deep. At night when the spirit of silence broods over the waters of the harbor and the darkness, wrapping masts and spars and rigging and hulls as with a curtain, making plain things seem mysterious, the three hoo-doo ships are even more forsaken and alone than they are when the warm sun is shining. Then it is that the mysterious influences which are supposed to surround hoo-doo vessels have free play and the ghosts walk undisturbed. And on moonlight nights there is no more suggestive picture, as viewed from the shore, than the little group of hoo-doo ships in their out-of-the-way corner of the harbor.

The Women's Guild of the Second Congregation of St. Andrew's Cathedral will hold a reception to welcome the Rev. Hamilton Lee, at the residence of Mrs. Robertson, Emma Square, on Monday evening, August 6, 1900, from 8 to 10. A general invitation is extended to all members of the congregation.

Among the society people who are leaving the Islands none will be more regretted than Dr. and Mrs. Frank R. Day, who intend to remain away from the Islands for some time and may ultimately conclude to reside abroad permanently.

Prof. and Mrs. Hosmer of Punahou College leave on the Australia for a year's visit on the Mainland and in Europe and will possibly return to take up their permanent residence in Honolulu.

Dr. George Herbert was the host at a stag dinner given at his residence Wednesday evening. His guests were Dr. Frank R. Day, Dr. Walter Hoffmann and Dr. St. G. Walters.

Dr. Ottlof, surgeon of the Geler, found in Dr. Walter Hoffmann of this city a fellow-student of university in Germany. He was entertained by the latter during his stay here.

Mr. Theodore F. Dredge, son-in-law of Alexander Young, returns to his home in Oakland on the Australia, after a pleasant visit of several weeks with Mr. Archie Young.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hoffmann entertained last Sunday evening at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Schaefer and Dr. and Mrs. Frank R. Day.

Mr. Jean Campbell, brother of Mr. Campbell, formerly with Punahou College, is now at Ewa, where he has a responsible position on the plantation.

Tomorrow evening Dr. Frank R. Day will entertain at a stag dinner in honor of Dr. Mays of San Francisco, who arrived on the Australia.

Mrs. Helen Alexander is entertaining a house party at Makawao, Maui. The party, eleven in number, left on last Tuesday's steamer.

Mrs. Mary Widdfield on Tuesday gave a very delightful dinner to Miss Alice Wall and Mrs. Frederic C. Smith.

Mr. Fred. Damon and Mr. Will. Damon leave for Makawao on Tuesday to remain for two or three weeks.

Mrs. Paxton, who visited Honolulu last year, has gone upon the stage, her debut being made at Los Angeles.

Miss Kathleen Ward expects to leave for the Coast shortly for a brief visit.

Prof. and Mrs. Hosmer entertained Prof. Brigham at dinner on Thursday.

Miss Mary Widdfield is rusticated at Makawao.

Miss Kulamau Ward is visiting on Hawaii.

The kitchen door opened with a "swish!" "Now, you," began the sharp-visaged lady of the house. "I ain't got no ole clothes; I ain't got nothing in fur you. Now git!" "Lady," said the furfarer, when he had recovered his breath, "I'm no beggar. I'm a peripatetic pedagogue, and I'd be glad to give you lessons in grammar in exchange for board and lodging."
